The Society exists to:

- Enable networking with colleagues in Addiction Medicine by providing a forum for sharing ideas.
- Provide closer liaison between members and the national activities of the American Society of Addiction Medicine.
- Provide liaison to other physicians, physician societies, and other healthcare entities in Maryland regarding Addiction Medicine issues.
- Increase public awareness and enhance knowledge and attitudes about the existence and vitality of the specialty of Addiction Medicine and the chronic disease of addiction and its related problems.
- Serve as a vehicle for increased professionalism and sharing higher quality information on prevention, training, and treatment regarding substance use disorders and related conditions.
- Serve as a resource for state and national public policy issues that affect Addiction Medicine services and patients with addiction.

Our Membership – Your Market

MDDCSAM is the voice of addiction medicine professionals practicing throughout Maryland and Washington DC, representing our membership before the Maryland and DC governments, and to healthcare stakeholders. MDDCSAM's reaches over 1,000 clinicians treating SUDs across the region, practicing in a variety of settings including independent practice, group practice, or employment at the area's major health systems. MDDCSAM supports our members professionally and personally by providing resources to improve their practice and meet individual needs. This includes in-person and digital events, electronic newsletters, direct mail, social media and our website.

Partnership: Visibility and Leadership in the Addiction Medicine Community

COVID-19 has posed enormous challenges to the medical community. MDDCSAM responded with a complete redesign of our programming for 2020-21 to better support our membership while decreasing infection risk. This included cancelling all in-person events, and opting for extensive digital education and networking opportunities.

Similarly, MDDCSAM has changed partnership opportunities from being centered on a single event with an exhibit hall, to a year-round, complete approach to connecting and networking with the addiction medicine community. MDDCSAM believes there is much to be gained working in partnership with organizations whose own missions support the work of our members.

Change is constant in the medical field today and it is important to our members to stay current on innovations that can improve their practices and provide ongoing professional education. Our partnerships are designed to create win-win situations. If your organization provides services and programs to benefit clinicians, practices and/or patients, MDDCSAM wants to work with you to grow your business within the addiction medicine community. If you are a physician practice or society of doctors, partnership can help you increase connections and prestige in the broader addiction medicine community and among Maryland and DC behavioral healthcare stakeholders.
